The Washington Department of Corrections is investigating an incident in which a briefcase full of sensitive personnel records was stolen from the vehicle of a Larch Corrections Center manager early Monday morning. The HR Manager took them home to review them, then left his briefcase on the seat of his car while he worked out at a 24-Hour Fitness Center. 43 files are missing, others had spilled out of the briefcase inside the floor. The files contained forms known as I-9s, which provide documentation that employees are legally able to work in the United States. They included driver's license and Social Security information such as home addresses and dates of birth.

The State Employees Credit Union informed about 300 customers in recent days that their account information had been obtained by skimmers and used to make withdrawals and purchases. Account information has been stolen through the state, according to SECU security officer Cory Mathes. "He said the widespread nature of the thefts leads him to believe either a large skimming network is involved or someone has hacked into the computer system of a company that processes debit card transactions."

ITRC20091229-01	Penn State University - several Colleges	PA		Electronic	Educational	Yes - Published #	30,000

It appears that several colleges in the University at Penn State have been affected by malware again over the holiday . It is unsure if this is the same breach as the School of Law. Malware infections to University computers caused all of the breaches, which occurred in the Eberly College of Science (7,758 records), the College of Health and Human Development (6,827 records) and one of Penn State's campuses outside of University Park (roughly 15,000 records). Malware is short for malicious software and refers to any software designed to cause damage to a single computer, server, or computer network, whether it's a virus, spyware, worm or other destructive program.

ITRC20091223-01	Wentworth-Douglass Hospital	NH		Electronic	Medical/Healthcare	Yes - Published #	1,800

Wentworth-Douglass Hospital had 2 employees who improperly accessed and changed patients' records. WDH spokeswoman Noreen Biehl confirmed Tuesday only one person lost their job as a result of the breach but didn't immediately respond to the allegation of an "accomplice" or whether another employee was involved in some way. The doctors have said the ex-employee altered records of some 1,100 patients after being transferred out of the lab, where she had worked for many years, after she was cited for poor performance. A state investigator is reviewing information he didn't have when he determined Wentworth-Douglass Hospital didn't have to notify patients whose records were improperly viewed or altered in a 13-month privacy breach, which involved about 1,800 unauthorized patient record views from May 2006 to June 2007.

According to GAO Report 10-56 to Congress, 72,000 Post Deployment Health Reassessment forms (PDHRA) are unaccounted for from 72,000 service members who returned from deployment to Iraq or Afghanistan between Jan 1, 2007 to May 31, 2008. ITRC has examined said forms which are filed electronically and clearly ask for the service member's SSN, Name, date of birth. While disclosure of any item is voluntary, they are "encouraged to answer each question." (in bold print). Quote: The discovery "suggests either that not all of these service members filled out the questionnaire or that questionnaires were filled out, but were not incorporated into Defense's central repository," wrote Randall Williamson, director of health care at the Government Accountability Office in a report to Congress.

Two Romanian men pleaded guilty to "skimming" nearly $200,000 from Atlanta area Washington Mutual ATMs. From fall 2007 to July 2008, the men are accused of attaching equipment to ATMs that would automatically record a bank customer's debit card number. Court authorities said the men, along with co-conspirators installed cameras above the ATM keyboards to record as the customer typed in the card's personal identification number or password.

ITRC20091111-05	Vancouver Public Schools	WA		Electronic	Educational	Yes - Published #	6,000

Social Security numbers of Vancouver Public Schools' 3,000-plus employees are assumed to be stolen, district officials said Tuesday. A security breach disclosed on Monday also involves personal banking account information for those employees who use direct payroll deposit, officials said. Several employees are already reporting suspicious banking activity. It appears someone who gained I.D. password access cracked into the Citrix software "server farm" hosted by Educational Service District 112, based in Vancouver. That person obtained personal payroll data, said Olsen and Linda Turner, the district's technology officer. An article printed 11/12 from Fox has now listed the exposed number at 6000

In September 2007, Ameritrade announced that the names, addresses, phone numbers and trading information of potentially all of its more than 6 million retail and institutional customers at that time had been compromised by an intrusion into one of its databases. The stolen information was later used to spam those customers. Consistently the company has said that while SSNs were in that same database they have investigated the situation and has affirmed that SSNs were not compromised. ITRC has confirmed with a source that worked with Ameritrade on this breach that SSNs were not breached. This is not a breach by ITRC criteria but is listed as an advisory only due to media attention.

ITRC20091016-02	Marshfield's Hancock Fabrics	WI		Electronic	Business	Yes - Unknown #	0

Officials are alerting residents that debit/credit cards used at two central Wisconsin fabric stores during late August and early September might have been compromised. During the weekend, numerous complaints came into law enforcement agencies in Wood and Portage counties reporting fraudulent activity on debit cards that appear to be automated teller machine transfers taking place in the Milwaukee area, Wood County Sheriff's Department Investigator Sgt. Dean Berres said. The card scanners at Marshfield's Hancock Fabrics seem to be the point of origin.

Update: Police in CA, WI and Missouri are reporting fraudulent ATM withdrawals linked to the hacking as of 11/23. The chain has 264 retail stores in 37 states.

Payroll services provider PayChoice took its Web-based service offline for the second time in a month in response to yet another data breach caused by hackers. PayChoice, provides direct payroll processing services and licenses its online employee payroll management product to at least 240 other payroll processing firms, serving 125,000 organizations. The company sent a notice to its customers saying it had closed onlineemployer.com - the portal for PayChoice's online payroll service -- after some clients began noticing bogus employees being added to their payroll.

Every 10 years, Flagler County purges its files. Unfortunately, this time county employees dumped about 15 boxes of applications, deeds, notices and plans in the trash — some of which included residents' driver's license and Social Security numbers. Only some of the documents were recovered. "Unfortunately, this same information still exists in the county's official records online," (County Administrator Craig) Coffey wrote recently in an online forum in response to public outcry. 68 hard drives are missing from the BlueCross BlueShield office in Eastgate, TN. Investigators also want to know why these drives might have been targeted. "We don't know what's on the hard drive files. Only blue cross blue shield does, but as with the medical files and anything else that contains personal information and social security numbers and financial information, there's always the possibility for identity theft," says Sgt. Weary. A Blue Cross spokesperson says she doesn't know if the missing drives contain private patient information. But they are cooperating in the event of possible identity theft.

Update: BCBS announced that the theft affects about 2 million clients. However, a call from ITRC to BCBS TN headquarters confirmed that specialized equipment would be needed to read the disks which lowers risk factor.

The Blue Cross Blue Shield national office had a laptop stolen from an employee of the national office in August. The breach involves "tens of thousands" of physicians nationwide, although the precise number is unclear, according to a national Blue Cross-Blue Shield spokesman. Thirty-nine affiliates feed information about providers into a database maintained by the association's national headquarters. "Jeff Smokler, national Blue Cross-Blue Shield spokesman, said the insurance giant - roughly 90 percent of physicians nationwide are in its network - encrypts all of its information on company computers, but an employee who was authorized to have the information violated company rules by downloading an unencrypted version onto a personal laptop. Smokler said the data breach was perhaps the most serious for Massachusetts physicians and other providers because they typically use their Social Security number as their tax identification number. Physicians in most other states, he said, choose separate tax ID numbers."

Update: Highmark is also notifying 50,000 doctors, mainly in PA that their information may have been on the laptop also.

The Inspector General of the National Archives and Records Administration is looking into a potential data breach of millions of records about US military veterans. The issue involves a defective hard drive the agency sent back to its vendor for repair and recycling without first destroying the data. The drive was part of a RAID array of six drives containing an Oracle database that held detailed records on 76 million veterans, including millions of Social Security numbers dating to 1972. The Pentagon requires that old drives be degaussed (de-magnified) or physically destroyed.

A file transfer program erroneously installed on a server in an Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) office at Boston University inadvertently exposed personal information including SSNs for thousands of people affiliated with the program. University officials say the compromised computer was taken off-line when the breach was identified on July 28. The security breach was discovered at approximately 2 p.m. on Friday, July 28, by Andrew B. Binder, a network administrator for the California-based Alfred Mann Foundation, a nonprofit medical research foundation. Binder, a U.S. Navy reservist who reports that he has been a victim of identity theft twice in recent years, says he was searching the Web for software to help connect to a military Web site when he came upon documents containing personal data.

DeKalb County Police have arrested two women and secured warrants for three others who took part in an organized identity theft ring that stole more than $50,000 from members of the U.S. Air Force. Detectives believe that in 2007, the suspects gained access to the secured alpha member roster of the 80th Aerial Port Squadron based out of Dobbins Air Force Base, said DeKalb Police spokeswoman Mekka Parish. Since that time, over 20 airmen in this unit have fallen victim to identify theft. The roster is classified and has dates of birth, names, SSNs and other information. The alpha roster the suspects used was from several years before the investigation started in 2007, making it difficult for officials to determine who from the squadron has been deployed in the past.

Scranton Police had files thrown in a dumpster that included names and SSNs. "One or more files that should have been shred were thrown into the dumpster," said Scranton Director of Public Safety Ray Hayes. He admitted that a mistake was made. Hundreds, perhaps thousands of old files were sitting in an alley next to the Scranton fire hall along Mulberry Street. Renovations have been going on in the upstairs training room and that has required the city to make some room. "They've taken out, literally, thousands of pounds of old files," Hayes added. Newswatch 16 found names, addresses, social security numbers, even what appeared to be an old evidence bag of marijuana; all things that could potentially end up in the wrong hands.

Thousands of nurses from around the country have had documents including medical records, SSNs, driver's license# and financial records dumped behind a spice store in Washington state. "On at least three recent Monday mornings, dozens of boxes were found in the business's unlocked waste receptacles. In those boxes, employee Eric Dillon tells Clancy workers found "medical records, social security numbers, driver's licenses. Probably 30 to 40 boxes. Not only that, there's financial records, legal documents, bank records, W2s.... The files appear to belong to a company called Code Blue Staffing Solutions. Code Blue's name and logo appear throughout every box. The company, which placed travelling nurses in jobs, has apparently been closed for years. Public records reveal that Code Blue was headquartered in Albuquerque. Its founder moved from New Mexico and is now living in Seattle's Magnolia neighborhood, just three miles from where the documents were dumped."

Hackers have broken into Web servers owned by domain registrar and hosting provider Network Solutions, planting rogue code that resulted in the compromise of more than 573,000 debit and credit card accounts over the past three months. "Herndon, Va. based Network Solutions discovered in early June that attackers had hacked into Web servers the company uses to provide e-commerce services - a package that includes everything from Web hosting to payment processing -- to at least 4,343 customers, mostly mom-and-pop online stores. The malicious code left behind by the attackers allowed them to intercept personal and financial information for customers who purchased from those stores." The payment data stolen was captured from transactions made between March 12, 2009 and June 8, 2009.

A hacker breached the University of California, San Diego's Moores Cancer Center's computers and gained access to 30,000 patients' personal information late last month. Spokeswoman DeAnn Marshall says the computer servers have information such as patients' names, birth dates, diagnosis, and treatment dates. She says most patient information did not include Social Security numbers and there is no evidence any of the information has been viewed. Update: only 36 SSNs were exposed.

Jose Blas Lorenzo Jr., director of policy, regulatory compliance and institutional review for the OSFA, said the missing files bear Social Security numbers, names and addresses, birth dates, personal references and lots of other little tidbits that could come in handy for an identity thief. "While your file was being processed for reassignment during the week of May 25, 2009, your promissory note(s) was lost," he wrote in the official notice approved by the Federal Trade Commission and sent to borrowers.

A Clayton County Sheriff's Department employee took a stack of documents from the office home in her car. A convicted felon was driving the car when they were found during a traffic stop. The employee told police she took home the stack of documents generated from Georgia Crime Information Center. She told police she left the documents in a bag inside the car but officers found the papers inside her glove compartment. Officials said she could be charged with unlawfully disseminating the sensitive materials, which contain names, phone numbers, dates of birth and Social Security numbers.

Dennis Group in Springfield left binders of documents with Verizon account numbers and insurance numbers in a dumpster behind the building. The documents have been left behind The Dennis Group's offices on Main Street in Springfield for days. The company claims it's in the middle of a move and getting rid of old documents as it converts to a paperless system. A shredding company in Wilbraham, which provides "on site" document destruction, says they actually contacted The Dennis Group when they first heard of the move, but the company said it would get rid of confidential documents on its own.

From their FAQ on website:
What happened?
An individual or individuals illegally "hacked" into a Batteries.com server, resulting in the exposure of name, address, and credit card information belonging to customers which was collected through Batteries.com's website.
When did this happen?
We believe the hacker(s) illegally accessed Batteries.com's server starting on February 25, 2009 and for a period of several weeks. The access diminished significantly on or around March 17, 2009, when we took certain enhanced data protection measures, and by April 9, 2009, the access was terminated.
When did Batteries.com learn of the incident?
We first learned of the potential exposure to the server on March 13, 2009, when a customer reported to the company potentially unauthorized activity regarding a credit card account.

An external hard drive containing 1 terabyte of data from the Clinton Administration is missing from the National Archives and Recording Administration. The information includes more than 100,000 SSNs and home addresses of people who visited or worked at the White House. The drive also contained details on the security procedures used by the Secret Service at the White House, as well as event logs, social gathering logs, political records and other information from the Clinton administration. Rep. Darrell Issa, (R-Calif.), ranking member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, in a statement yesterday said that the loss is believed to have occurred between October 2008 and March 2009. According to Issa, the Archives was in the process of converting information from the drive to a digital records system when it apparently disappeared. The hard drive was apparently removed from a secure storage area to a workplace where at least 100 "badge-holders" had access to it, Issa noted. In addition to those with official access to the area, the IG said that janitors, visitors, interns and others passed through the area, Issa said.

The NJ State Department of Labor and Workforce Development notified 28,000 people last week that their Social Security numbers may have been accidentally sent to employers whom they did not work for. Spokesperson Smith said the error occurred when department staff last month sent first-quarter reports to businesses that included a list of former employees receiving unemployment benefits. Because some companies had laid off a significant number of employees, the reports were longer than usual, requiring staff members to stuff the envelopes by hand rather by machine.

A couple of thousand files, in plain sight, which authorities say contained sensitive medical and identity information, were found at the Dupont Recycling Center Saturday afternoon. "Upon finding those, they discovered it wasn't a small amount. it was a large amount that we had to notify Hutcheson medical center and one other medical facility," says Investigator William Puckett with the Chattanooga Police Department. The files included graphic photos and SSNs. Update: It was discovered they belong to a now deceased doctor whose family was clearing out a storage area. No charges are being filed.

A former San Francisco bank mailroom supervisor accused in an identity theft scam faces up to seven years in prison if convicted, prosecutors said today. San Francisco prosecutors say that over a six-month period beginning in April 2007, he allegedly opened customer mail at a First Republic Bank branch containing both commercial and personal identifying information. He then allegedly made copies of checks, and sold those copies as part of a larger identity theft scheme. The checks were later used by someone else to replicate the bank account and issue checks from that account. The Secret Service revealed that as many as 560 pieces of mail may have been opened.

CBS News reports that thieves with a master key stole scores of computers from approximately 60 out of 80 tenant businesses in the Chateau Office Building on Ventura Blvd. Business owners estimate that at least 7,000 credit card numbers, 800 tax documents and other sensitive files were stolen. The thieves disabled security cameras and some owners thought it was an inside job. "It had to be somebody who knows that building," said Mary Hatcher, who manages several companies in the building. "It wasn't forced entry."

Marian Medical Center in Santa Maria says recent patients of the emergency room and Urgent Care Center should be on alert after a Blackberry containing patient information was stolen from the hospital. In recent weeks, administrators at Marian Medical Center discovered a Blackberry portable device with information including patient names, Social Security numbers, dates of birth and medical histories was stolen from an employee's office, along with some other items. "On that Blackberry was an email, you know, one of our emails, and on one of the emails was buried a file attachment that had some patient information on it," said Sue Andersen, chief financial officer of Marian Medical Center.

ITRC20090422-02	New York State Department of Taxation and Finance	NY	10/17/2008	Electronic	Government/Military	Yes - Unknown #	0

Attorney General Andrew Cuomo has charged a Troy resident with identity theft — using social security numbers to open fraudulent credit cards. Walter Healey, 63, was an employee with the Department of Taxation and Finance unit. He allegedly used his position to take taxpayers information from tax department files and used that information to apply for and obtain credit cards. Currently, the attorney general's office is in the process of contacting victims whose names were used to open fraudulent credit cards. State tax officials are also sending notification to more than 2,000 affected individuals throughout the state, as required by law.

An Oct. 17 search of his residence, a former funeral home near Frear Park, uncovered the tax forms of more than 700 citizens, more than 1,000 copies of birth certificates and some 2,000 Post-It notes containing handwritten social security numbers, many including notes such as "good prospect" and "go with this one," according to a complaint filed by the AG's office. Also found were hundreds of pages of credit card statements, credit applications, and copies of credit cards in the name of George Healey, investigators said.

About 6,000 University of Washington employees were notified this week that their names and Social Security numbers were on a parking-management computer system that was hacked. A UW police report indicates that two parking-management computer servers were hacked starting around Dec. 6 last year. An initial on-site review by the UW on Dec. 30 showed "obvious signs of compromise," prompting the university to take the servers offline, according to the report. Kirk Bailey, the UW's chief information-security officer, said that although there were signs of something amiss last year, it took until the end of February or the beginning of March to complete an investigation.

Personal information for 7,845 town taxpayers was exposed on the Internet last weekend due to a vendor's mistake, town officials said late Thursday. In a statement, town manager Jeff Muzzy said the problem was discovered March 27 and the information was removed by March 30. In a letter dated today that's due to be mailed to town taxpayers and posted on the town's Web site, Muzzy wrote that the files containing the names, addresses and Social Security numbers of residents were on a password-protected site that was compromised.

Medical records found discarded in a south Shreveport convenience store's trash bin were put there by a doctor. Dr. Frederick Knight, contacted by KTBS News, said he put the files in the trash bin over the weekend. Knight acknowledged it was a mistake on his part and said he is taking steps to get the files back and properly dispose of them. Knight, who said he had dumped things before, faces a possible fine. Police said the files contained patients' names and Social Security numbers.

ITRC20090313-02	Norm Coleman Campaign	MN	1/28/2009	Electronic	Business	Yes - Published #	4,721

Wikileaks published information to substantiate a rumor that sensitive information belonging to thousands of Coleman's supporters had been floating around the Internet since Jan. 28 "as a result of sloppy handling by the campaign."

Wikileaks said the decision to publish the information was prompted by claims from Coleman's campaign that no data been compromised and by its failure to apologize for the "initial leak" or its subsequent "cover-up." The statement said that Coleman's campaign had known about the breach since January but had failed to notify anyone of the potential compromise of their personal data. Wikileaks claimed that the senator collected detailed information on every supporter and Web site visitor and retained unencrypted credit card information from donors, including their security codes, on the campaign's Web site.

A security breach involving personal data for 29,500 Kaiser Permanente workers in Northern California reportedly occurred in the offices of an employee union. Law enforcement detectives have determined the information was taken from the offices of United Healthcare Workers-West in July 2007, Kaiser said in a written statement. The stolen data included names, addresses, dates of birth and Social Security numbers for Kaiser employees. The theft came to light after the arrest of San Ramon resident Mia Garza, 28, on Dec. 23 on suspicion of possession of stolen property and forgery. In a confiscated computer, San Ramon police later found a file with the Kaiser employee data. Garza was not a Kaiser employee and it is not clear how she obtained the information.

"The disk obviously made it into some surplus property; into a computer box with other things by accident," City Clerk Pam Bush said. "It happened sometime between 2000 and 2007. Some of the former accounts on the disk had telephone numbers and some had Social Security numbers, but most did not have forwarding addresses. We've had three information technology directors since 2000, and the current director does not surplus disks. The previous two did not either, but the disk somehow made it into a box that was sent to an auction."

On Tuesday, January 20, 2009, the University of Florida discovered a configuration error in its LDAP directory service that would allow anyone to query the directory for fields that are normally protected from unauthorized access. A human error was made while making changes to the directory service that created the exposure. The error was fixed immediately after it was detected and the 9 digit number field was permanently removed from the directory. Reviewing the directory logs, we discovered queries that might have returned the name and a 9 digit directory field that is the Social Security Number (SSN) for 101 users. The query response screen did not identify the 9 digit number as an SSN.

Govtrip.com, which handles travel reservations for at least a dozen U.S. government agencies, last week was infected with a virus that tried to install malicious software when users visited the site, causing some agencies to block employees from accessing it, Security Fix has learned. Sometime on Feb. 11, hackers changed the Govtrip.com Web site to redirect visitors to a site that installed malicious software. A number of agencies, including the departments of Agriculture, Energy, Health & Human Services, Interior, Transportation, and Treasury, use the site exclusively to book travel arrangements. Govtrip.com also is used to reimburse workers via direct deposit, which means that many federal employees' checking account information is stored there as well.

Records of more than 1,000 patient visits to Northeast Orthopaedics, a large Albany surgical practice on Everett Road, have been posted on the Internet, a violation of patient privacy laws. Alan Okun, practice administrator, said the North Carolina company that transcribes dictation for the doctors had a security lapse. The problem was discovered earlier this week and the company, MRecord, removed the records, he said. However, Google archiving has not be erased yet. At least 300 records are detailed narratives of patient visits. About 1,000 patients' records are revealed through daily schedules for the practice from March through August 2008. The schedules include patient names, dates of birth and the reason for the visit, like "follow-up knee." "Our plan is to contact those patients, let them know, and be forthright," Okun said. "We are outraged." The records appeared on the Web site ###.com, which seems to be a defunct company in India. Some of the documents include records from a South Carolina orthopedic practice. Those records include patient names, birth dates and Social Security numbers.

Two weeks ago the Internal Revenue Service shut down the "Anti-Gym" for non-payment of payroll taxes. Somehow many of the gym's records turned up outside in the trash. CBS4 Investigator Rick Sallinger was alerted and recovered some of them. While the owner said that he took all credit card information with him, CBS found several credit card numbers complete with expiration dates and security codes. The IRS says it did not dump the gym's records in the dumpster.

On the Upper NY West Side scores of bank statements, 401k statements, credit reports, tax returns and driver's licenses were found scattered on the streets. "Elyssa Shapiro was on her way to work and couldn't believe what she was seeing. "Just all kinds of information. Things that you never want anyone to know about yourself," she said. "It was four blocks worth of personal information and it was identity theft waiting to happen."
The documents belonged to the local office of Citi Habitats, one of New York's best-known real estate firms. Their clients, whose personal information we found amid the trash, were appalled. "

Hundreds of files — with social security numbers, bank account numbers and other sensitive U.S. government information — were found in a filing cabinet purchased from the U.S. consulate in Jerusalem through a local auction. The consulate was unaware of the missing files until FOX News contacted U.S. officials. Initially they said that no filing cabinets were sold in the auction, but later they acknowledged the sale. The State Department has now launched an investigation.

Hundreds of credit and debit card holders appear to have been victims of a nationwide data theft carried out against Heartland Payment Systems, which processes cards for 250,000 restaurants, retailers and other businesses. Several Maine credit unions have been told by Visa and MasterCard that fraudulent charges were placed on members' cards between May 16 and August 19, 2008, according to Jon Paradise, a spokesman for the Maine Credit Union League. Many of the charges were tallied at Wal-Mart stores in Texas, he said. According to the Washington Post (Brian Krebs), tens of millions of people may be affected. Baldwin said Heartland does not know how long the malicious software was in place, how it got there or how many accounts may have been compromised. The stolen data includes names, credit and debit card numbers and expiration dates. "The transactional data crossing our platform, in terms of magnitude... is about 100 million transactions a month," Baldwin said. "At this point, though, we don't know the magnitude of what was grabbed."
Update: As of the end of May 2009, more than 656 institutions have been impacted. As of October the number of records seems to have stabilized at 130 million. ITRC wants to remind all readers: the number of records does not mean number of people

Two men are in custody and under investigation by the FBI in an identity theft scheme that victimized 2,500 Cache County residents, Smithfield police officials said Wednesday. In late 2008, San Francisco police served a search warrant on a Bay Area hotel room where detectives found multiple computers and a machine that manufactures magnetic strips used on the back of credit, debit and gift cards, Det. Travis Allen said. In the computers' hard drives were the credit card numbers of Cache County, UT, residents, many of whom had been notified by their banks of fraudulent charges on their accounts, Allen added. "We finally found one common factor among everybody that was calling us: They had all used the Family Fun Box," Allen said. The DVD-dispensing machines were located in the Summit Creek Sinclair gas station and Lee's Marketplace in Smithfield. A third operated in the Wellcome Mart in Wellsville.

2009 Breaches Identified by the ITRC as of:	1/6/2010	Total Breaches: 498
		Records Exposed: 222,477,043

The ITRC Breach database is updated on a daily basis, and published to our website on each Tuesday. Unless noted otherwise, each report includes breaches that occurred in the year of the report name (such as "2009 Breach List", or became public in the report name year, but were not public in the previous year. Each item must be previously published by a credible source, such as Attorney General's website, TV, radio, press, etc. The item will not be included at all if ITRC is not certain that the source is real and credible. We include in each item a link or source of the article, and the information presented by that article. Many times, we have attributions from a multitude of media sources and media outlets. ITRC sticks to the facts as reported, and does not add or subtract from the previously published information. When the number of exposed records is not reported, we note that fact. When records are encrypted, we state that we do not (at this time) consider that to be a data exposure. However, we do not consider password protection as adequate, and we do consider those events to be a data exposure.

The ITRC Breach Report presents individual information about data exposure events and running totals for the year. The ITRC Breach Stats Report develops some statistics based upon the type of entity involved in the data exposure.

This project was supported by Grant No. 2007-VF-GX-K038 awarded by the Office for Victims of Crime, Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice.
